The instructor-student relationship is a very special and sacred interaction. Aroma Apothecary Healing Arts Academy seeks to provide students with highest quality professional teachers of good character, with an exemplary degree of understanding, patience, and compassion. While we do our utmost in the hiring process to assure that a mutual balance of student educational excellence and faculty satisfaction remains the highest priority, we rely on our students to provide feedback and input through written course evaluations and verbal communications.

We require our instructors to be on time, to dress professionally in accordance with the type of course they are teaching, to be prepared, to maintain appropriate student/teacher boundaries, to represent and uphold the policies of our school, to be fair, clear and complete in their teaching and grading.

We appreciate hearing from our students when an instructor is doing an excellent job, so that we can reward them appropriately. We also appreciate hearing if an instructor is not meeting academic expectations, not maintaining professional conduct at all times, or if other problems are occurring.
